The entire community was stunned by the tragedy which occurred Wednesday night a week ago when two shots coming from the apartments of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Haas in the Hotel Haas resulted in a finding the woman dead and her husband so badly wounded that he died early the following morning. The entire affair is shrouded in an impenetrable mass of mystery and the only parties who could shed light on it are dead.

The shooting occurred shortly before 10 o'clock soon after the eldest daughter of the couple, Lorna Ross, aged 16, had bade the good night. Persons about the hotel heard sounds of a scuffle followed by two shots in quick succession. When Harry Fugle, B. J. Peters, and H. L. Kallenbach, forced their way into the private apartments of the Haas family they found both husband and wife outstretched upon the floor bleeding profusely from wounds in the head. Mrs. Haas was dead before they reached her side, but Mr. Haas still lived. Drs. T. B. Edwards and M. B. Shupe were summoned and hurried the victim man to the South Side private hospital.
